Introduction

Pattern of examination and its efficacy determines the diagnostic and terminal behaviour of the students. In fact, it should be a tool of improvement of level of achievement of students in terms of knowledge and skill. Its effectiveness therefore, depends upon the dissemination of knowledge by teachers and its assimilation by the students. Of late, the trans-national character of education in the wake of globalization expects it to be the instrument of bringing social, cultural and economic transformation of a society. Owing to the fact that a radical transformation has taken place in Higher Education and examination has now been placed as an integral part of curricula, emphasis is being attached on reforming the examination system. Hence the need to make it fit to stand the test of time becomes pertinent. Educationists, policymakers, teachers need to put their endeavour towards revamping the system and prepare a model ensuring validity, reliability and objectivity in the examination system and help making all round development of a student possible. The deficiencies in the system need revamping with the objective to raise not only the knowledge and skills of the students but also the quality of education imparted in the institutions of higher learning.
